The Homestead Acts were several laws in the United States by which an applicant could acquire ownership of land, typically called a "homestead." In all, more than 270 million acres of public land, or nearly 10% of the total area of the U.S., was given away free to 1.6 million homesteaders; most of the homesteads were west of the Mississippi River.

The success of the Dominion Lands Act overall is questionable. [citation needed] Large-scale immigration to the prairies did not get underway until 1896 (immigrants prior to then generally preferring to live in the U.S. due to a protracted recession in Canada that followed confederation) [dubious – discuss]. Also, the first version of the act set up extensive exclusion zones.
